

Liam Murphy - Biography

Liam Murphy is an advertising and fashion photographer based in Dublin, Ireland.

Having completed a degree in Communications in the Dublin Institute of Technology with honours, he started out as a Director of Photography lighting short films.

Discovering an increased passion for the still image, Liam began assisting major Irish photographers, learning the trade and honing his craft, a move which eventually led him first to New York and then to Milan where he worked for 3 years. Milan provided him with not only the opportunity to work with internationally acclaimed photographers and clients, but also to concentrate on shooting his own work.

Since his arrival back in Dublin in 2007, Liam has rapidly established himself as both an advertising and fashion photographer, working with many leading advertising and design agencies as well as having his fashion work featured in numerous publications.

In 2007, Liam also held his first solo exhibition 'Work', which was a resounding success and completed a three-week run.

Liam's project 'Baggot Street Bridge' was recently shortlisted for the Gallery of Photography Artist's Award. A selection of images from this project was featured in the exhibition Showcase which ran in the Gallery of Photography for 6 weeks earlier this year.
